

Wed. Night

Hello,

Well another week is half over. Even though it has been in a new place, it has been a whole lot like the ones I have spent in the past. We are doing quite a bit the same things we did in basic but the rest of the men in the division are doing about the same things so we aren't so different. I can't remember whether I told you or not but the division was on maneuvers all winter in Tennessee. They are more or less reviewing now - doing bayonet work, running squad problems, etc, etc, etc.

They shifted us all around into different barracks this evening so I have about spent my whole evening straightening out my stuff.

Where I am now I have a lot more room than I did before.

^{and} ~~now~~ all have single beds here.
I have slept in the top bunk of a double bed ever since I left the 16th Company so it is quite a relief to have a bed to myself again.

It is raining outside tonight, and the temperature is getting pretty cold. It has been raining off and on ever since we got here. I have caught some cold but it isn't very serious.

~~I've got only a couple of minutes~~ till lights out so I'll close for tonight. Likely I'll put this excuse for a letter in an envelope in the morning.

Goodnight + God
Bless you all,
Donald.
