

UNITED STATES ARMY

Tuesday Evening.

Hello Folks,

Don't get excited about the air mail stamp because I just feel like getting a letter to you in a hurry tonight. For no special reason either that I can think of.

I do have just a little news about my ear though. I kept my appointment yesterday and went over to the clinic. But I waited all afternoon and they didn't get around to me. All they did was give me another appointment for the 14th. Well this just disgusted me to the very end.

You don't need to think I'm trying to keep anything from you but ^{fully} truth it hasn't been hurting me. I just didn't want it to go for another whole week without being looked at so I went on sick call this morning. Since the clinic isn't doing anything they at least looked at it, gave me some different drops for it and said to come back Saturday. The doctor said it was a whole lot better than it was last week but he still wanted me to go to the clinic next week. Even though he didn't do much he at least took enough interest to make me feel a whole lot better. So much for that.

I have begun to get back into the radio work again. Only now instead of just working on radio we are learning about other types of communication. We started learning about telephone yesterday. We learned to use tree ^{poles} climbers and a little bit about splicing wire. Like everything else I'll just have to wait and see how deep we get into this.

UNITED STATES ARMY

We saw an air demonstration this afternoon (the entire post went out to see it). I guess the purpose of it was so that we would realize the necessity of learning to protect ourselves from air attack. The thing that impressed me most was the power of bombs. They were dropped on a hill 3 or 4 miles from us and you could just feel the ground shake that far away.

Well K P has finally caught up with me. I must hit the hay so I'll be ready for it tomorrow.

Love

Donald.

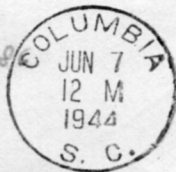

Glad to get a letter from you this evening.
