Wednesday Eve.

Dear Folks.

Well for plenty of reasons this is going to be mighty short. I hope to be seeing you soon anyway and this will likely arrive while I'm home. In fact if it were a fool proof point that I would be home, I wouldn't even write at all tonight. But, of course, there still might be something happen to prevent it.

What I said still holds true though; if I can't come I'll let you know. I sure hope that I won't have to call.

Things turning out this way make me feel a lot better toward the officer that I work for. I explained to him just how working the night shift on Friday effected me and he changed the schedule to help me out. I believe that if there wasn't such a strict rule here about no pass being over 3 days long, he would have given me an extra day or so. They consider anything over three days a furlough and you know about how the army feels about giving furloughs.

Well I want to get a haircut tonight so I'll be slick for the week-end. So I hope you don't mind this being so short.

I got your Sunday letter at noon today Be good and I'll be seeing you.

Your son and brother,

Donald.
